Being an imperial colony of Great Britain, India (modern-day India and parts of Pakistan and Bangladesh), was by default a part of the Allies of World War II (1939-1945). India was thus susceptible to the attacks. Considering the danger, British Govt. took all the precautions in case of sudden attacks on the Indian subcontinent. All factory establishments were sent circulars informing them about the precautions to be taken during the air raid. We present here one such circular sent to Godrej & Boyce Mfg. Co. Ltd. by Mr. Gordon Place, Chief Adviser, Factory Air Raid Precautions, Government of India (British India) in the year 1942.
